Solar Cookers International and PPAF are holding a webinar this Friday as part of the UN High-Level Political Forum on Sustainable Development.

REGISTER HERE

Solar Cookers International and PPAF will showcase solar cooking as a cross-cutting solution in the recovery from COVID-19 and to help achieve the UN Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

Speakers will spotlight evidence-based results, interlinkages with the SDGs, and how the UN Voluntary National Review system can create an enabling environment for scaling solar cooking. The PPAF presentation will give an update on project progress in Haiti.

Speakers include:

- Yabei Zhang, PhD, World Bank Group
- Dr. Ajay Chandak, SCI Global Advisor
- Rose Bazile, SCI Global Advisor
- David Stillman, PhD, Public-Private Alliance Foundation
- Asna Towfiq, Clean Cooking Alliance
- Caitlyn Hughes, SCI Executive Director
- Alan Bigelow, PhD, SCI Science Director
- Mindy Fox, SCI Special Projects Manager

Energy from the sun makes possible solar cooking instead of cooking over open fires. This has many benefits -- cooking & water pasteurization, cleaner air & safer water, reduced deforestation, action against climate change, fewer respiratory infections, income from construction & sales of cookers, money saved from cost of other fuels, more time for school and work. The list goes on, because solar cooking has linkage to all 17 of the SDGs.

Solar power is the wave of the future and has always been available. It is time to take advantage of this more fully as we seek to achieve all the SDGs.
