Thanks and a new opportunity

Dear Friends,

First, thank you to everyone who contributed to our successful #GivingTuesday campaign. The Haitian painting was won by the highest donor, and we decided to give a framed photograph to five others who gave more than $100 each.

Today we want to alert you to a new opportunity. PPAF is a member of the Global Giving platform since 2017. Our reports for the project Tracking Clean Cookstoves & Fuel in Haiti show the great progress we and collaborators are making. Donors have so far provided over $7,700 toward the project goal of $10,000. With your help we hope to achieve that goal by year-end.

You can use the links above to send a gift. Please note: Global Giving will match the first month of any new recurring donations started before December 31.

As our thanks to you, if you make a gift of $100 or more we can send you a framed 8x10 inch photo taken at the Carnival in Jacmel by Fedno Lubin, a young Haitian photographer. Two examples are here, but you can choose from among 20 thumbnails in the .pdf below.

Then just send an email to ppafoundation@gmail.com noting your choice and a postal address. We'll be in touch!

Now see below for some updates and new events.

Warm regards,

David Stillman, PhD, Executive Director

Solar and Biogas Course at Université Notre Dame d'Haiti - Hinche

The first-ever Haitian college course on solar cooking, biodigesters for biogas and garden fertilizer and related steps toward entrepreneurship is underway. The photos below show students hard at work on their mid-term exams and verifying that the biodigester indeed produces flammable gas. In the green shirt is the lead instructor, a member of the university's "Comite Biogaz et Recho Soley." PPAF and several other organizations are working to make the course a success that can be repeated in future semesters. Read more about this in our reports for the project Tracking Clean Cookstoves & Fuel in Haiti

Next Steps

In a few days Solar Cookers International Associate Rose Bazile, and Kathy Puffer of Solar CITIES Global Biogas Education, will visit UNDH - Hinche to meet with students and faculty, give workshops and assess progress. Rose will bring with her two new solar cookers to add to those already on site for demonstration and testing. The new ones are the Haines 2.0, a light-weight and inexpensive model shown in a recent newsletter. Company CEO Roger Haines is also providing a Haines 2.0 for use-testing in Port-au-Prince with the Haitian Adolescent Girls Network.

Breaking News!

We have just learned that one of Fedno Lubin's photos has been accepted in a juried competition for a show at the Upstream Gallery in January 2019. PPAF is happy to be promoting his work in the USA as part of our efforts to encourage sustainable development in Haiti. Below is the photo that was accepted for the exhibit.
