

Public-Private Alliance Foundation

NEWSLETTER

September 11, 2014

Dear PPAF Colleagues and Friends,

As summer winds down and the busy fall season starts, we hope you will take a few moments to give a gift to the Public-Private Alliance Foundation for the next phase of our exciting project. Based on a successful consultancy for the Inter-American Development Bank, we are expanding its work on ethanol cookstoves and fuel in Haiti.

We have established a "GoFundMe" campaign to support this. It will help Haitian women gain access to newly designed stoves and help install an improved ethanol distillery. To donate, go to: www.gofundme.com/Safe-Cooking-in-Haiti This is a secure site.

We are seeking funds for two components of the next phase:

1/ Manufacture of stoves in Haiti and related use-testing with distributors and customers ($10,000). Pictured below is the prototype stove with a cooking pot of the size often used by Haitian families and street vendors.

Local fabrication of the prototype will expand to regular manufacture in a Haitian factory. Stoves will then be provided to distributors and sold to end-users. A portion of sales will be retained by the distributors, who are mainly women, and the rest returned to enable more production and modifications if needed

2/ Setting up a distillery for fuel ($30,000). A small-scale distillery for ethanol (high-proof alcohol) will be installed at a technical school where students will be trained in its maintenance and use. The photo below is an example.

We look forward to your support and hope everyone will get involved. Be sure to send the GoFundMe link to your friends and ask for their help!
